Your MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

By Patricia Lee

When a woman threatens to leave her husband and keeps repeating those threats without taking any action, her warnings are about as effective as the cry of "wolf" in the much-told story. Here is Mrs. S. F., who has a drinking husband. Every time he comes home intoxicated she threatens to leave him. He continues to drink and she stays on.

Says the WOMAN

Dear Patricia Lee—
I have a husband who drinks continually and when he is in such a condition he is abusive. At other times he is a good man and always kind. Every time he becomes intoxicated I tell him I will leave him, but it does no good. What shall I do?
Naturally, Mrs. S. F., you've told your husband that story so often he doesn't pay any attention to you. The next time he comes home intoxicated and abuses you, don't give him any warning, don't say anything at all. Just leave him. Go to your mother or some other relative and give him a chance to decide whether he is willing to give up drink or not. You certainly never will accomplish anything by mere threats, and I don't know any other method of curing him.

Can any man maintain his self-respect and permit his wife to adopt a contemptuous attitude in public? George Johm has about decided he won't tolerate it any longer, but he lacks the moral courage to do anything decisive in this case. He provides generously for his wife, treats her kindly, maybe too kindly for her type, and yet, when they are in public, she jeers him and once she was angry with him and slapped his face before more than a dozen of his friends. Yet, he wants to know what to do.

Says the MAN

Dear Patricia Lee—
I am married to a woman who is intelligent and attractive. I treat her kindly.

provide generously for her and when we are alone she is a good companion, but as soon as she gets an audience she makes me the butt of her jokes and belittles me in company. Once she got angry when I remonstrated and, as she has a bad temper, she slapped my face. I was too humiliated and hurt to do anything. How can I change her?
GEORGE JOHM.

Maybe you're the sort of man who can take such treatment and not feel a contempt for yourself. But I'm hoping you're not. What that woman needs is the man who would have slapped her back and taken her home. She'd never try such a thing again. The next time she puts you in a humiliating position, reprimand her, and if she continues, leave the party. It's a courageous thing to do, but it may help matters. If she finds she can't get away with it, she won't try it. Frankly, I don't see how you can love such a woman; but then, love is a funny thing.

Patricia Lee answers questions every day relating to problems of married life. Names and addresses should be added to letters as a mark of good faith, but will not be published in the paper. Write to Patricia Lee, in care of The GRAPHIC, 25 City Hall Place.

How To EARN MONEY at HOME

By Sara Spence

I do fine embroidery and crochet. How can I sell it? I live so far from New York.
SAYVILLE.

You will have to take a day off and visit the shops and exchanges and get your work accepted. Take along samples. If it is good they will give you orders. I believe they charge a commission.

I'm weaving rugs, doing well. But, oh, boy. They sure do keep me busy. I'm making enough money to hire a helper. All at home.

Keep at it. But do your own weaving. It is your artistic touch that is the thing.

My husband is going away on business, to be gone six months. What can I do to keep myself busy while he is gone? I can cook, keep house, etc.

MRS. K.
You have every opportunity to go into fancy baking. Invent a new loaf of bread; put it up attractively in tin boxes. I have a friend who does this. Her loaves are fruit loaves, dark and good. They sell for $1 each; and they are very small at that. But, oh, so carefully made.

I have a beautiful piece of embroidery. Where can I sell it?
S. A.

You write such a nice letter—I could not print it all—that I feel sure your embroidery is good. Why don't you try to get a fancy shop to sell it on commission? So many little shops do this. And you can deal with strangers—if you prefer. It certainly isn't pleasant to beg your friends to buy.

I want to get work from 7 to 10 every evening. What can I do?
MARY C.

I have a friend who goes to a very handsome tearoom every evening at 6. She remains until 10. Her job is to wash the fine dishes that cannot be entrusted to ordinary hands. She is behind a screen. And she gets $3 an evening and actually enjoys her work.

Mrs. Spence will answer questions on "How to Earn Money at Home." Tell her your situation, and she will gladly take up your special case and advise you. There is no charge and your name will not appear. Address Mrs. Sara Spence, The Evening GRAPHIC, 25 City Hall Place.

The Better Side Of Life

To be an important figure in the news one must be a robber, a murderer or be conspicuous in a scandal of some sort. It is our belief that this habit of giving so much importance to crime in our newspapers is to be deplored. We intend to devote this department to news of a different sort. We want true stories of heroism, extreme cases of loyalty and sacrifice. We want to give the better side of life its proper significance. Some day newspapers may give crime but little attention and liberally emphasize good deeds. The object of this department is to encourage a change of this sort.

APPROACH IS EVERYTHING

Driving my car in the country, I was about to turn homeward, when a woman carrying a suitcase in one hand and leading a child by the other passed by. Something in the woman's hurried attitude prompted me to turn around and speak to her. She answered me rather sulkily, but I continued to talk softly to her, offering her a ride to her destination. She had no home and no money, so I persuaded her to get in the car with her tired child and I drove them to my mother's, who fed and sheltered them. The poor woman told me later that she had resolved to do the worst to provide for herself and child if I had not happened along and spoken to her.
MARY CANTWELL.
